

Who we are

The Trust is run by eight Trustees, and together with other volunteers from the area, they look after the content and well-being of some not-for-profit community websites in the Wharfedale area.

We do so because, living in Wharfedale, we believe that the internet can benefit the community through the provision of online information.

What we do

We provide the local communities of Wharfedale with an online information service, run by the community for the community.

We operate as a Charitable Trust, which allows us to generate the small amount of funds needed to pay for such things as domain names.

The websites are maintained in a variety of ways, some sections are open to the public to enter their own information, whilst others are kept current by volunteers.

The sites themselves also need looking after - another of the roles that Trust members and supporters undertake.
